Relational Leadership

If every day feels like a battle, it may be time to examine your leadership style.

Leading by example and establishing a baseline for behavior, the relational leader models inclusivity, engagement, process orientation, and empowerment. A critical factor in effectiveness for any organization, the relational leader inspires others to work together to accomplish their goals.

In this presentation, Brigadier General (Ret.) Shan K. Bagby shares essential strategies in leader development, including finding meaning and gratitude in relationships. Additionally, an emphasis will be made on self-care, work/life balance, legacy, and lifelong learning.

Learning Objectives:

- Learn how to develop or enhance your leadership philosophy
- Characterize and evaluate relational vs other leadership styles
- Cultivate an environment where every team member feels valued
- Recognize the importance of work/life balance and self-care
- Illuminate how mentoring and being mentored generates legacy
- Explore how occupational domains and competencies enable career development
